

Abstract

The subject invention pertains to materials and methods for the visualization of the lens and the anterior lens capsule of the eye. In particular, the subject invention pertains to 5 visualization of the lens and anterior lens capsule during cataract operations, with or without lens replacement procedures. The subject invention involves directing light or introducing a means for emitting light, particularly laser light, into the eye.